New Zealand Cemetery Records

A List of Microfiche Holdings

This handbook has been produced as microfiche number one. It contains the New Zealand Society of Genealogists New Zealand Cemetery Records held up to 2007. The transcriptions consist mainly of headstone inscriptions and burial records. Some public memorials are also included.

Acknowledgements

Most of the records in this collection have been compiled by volunteers who have donated their time transcribing the headstones, burial, and other records. By donating the transcriptions to the Society they are made available for the benefit of all genealogists. The Society acknowledges, with sincere thanks, the hard work, enthusiasm and generosity shown by all members who have helped with such projects.

Further thanks are due to the Society Officers and members who have spent many hours preparing the material for this publication.

Introduction

The Microfiche Collection

The Society is proud to have made its collection of cemetery records more widely available to researchers by reproducing it on microfiche. The microfiche set is in numerical sequence from 001, these numbers being shown at the top right of each fiche. The handbook has a column that shows the fiche numbers for a given cemetery transcription.

The cemetery transcriptions are arranged in approximate geographical order by district from north to south, making the search of a complete district a simple task. The name of the district is shown on the left hand side of each fiche heading, with the numbers of the individual cemeteries contained on that fiche. Transcription pages are arranged from left to right across the fiche and should be read in that manner. On the microfiche there is no overall index of people buried in New Zealand. It is therefore necessary to check the index of each transcription.

Our transcribers are encouraged to work with care and check for accuracy, but unintentional errors will always occur. Researchers are reminded of the importance of checking other sources, or of sighting the original sources.

Counties

The County names are those that were in use as at 1985. Over the years the system of county organisation has undergone considerable revision with the result that some counties have become defunct and others have been expanded to take in urban areas as well as rural. Sometimes a change of name has occurred in the process. (For example: Lake County has combined with Queenstown Borough and is now known as Queenstown - Lake District.)

Transcriptions already microfiched cannot be altered. Likewise, the references given and numbers allocated are fixed. This List of Holdings uses the 1985 County names as headings but also endeavours to show clearly some of the former counties involved.

Dividing pages

On the dividing page that introduces each cemetery on microfiche, the name and contents of the transcription are given. Also included are numbers such as 260/83, which represent the accession number and year of accession. Their only relevance to the researcher is to indicate that the transcription was compiled in or before 1983.

Composite Transcriptions

These are usually newspaper extracts or monumentalists' records covering a wider area than one county. For example: Nelson material includes BDM entries relating to Marlborough, the West Coast and even further afield where those named had connections with Nelson area.

Compilations of newspaper extracts commencing after 1940 are now held in the Book Section of the Society's Library.

Number of pages, sketch plans, news clippings

The number of pages shown in the listing refers to the number actually microfiched. Unless specific burials were mentioned, printed material from books and newspapers giving background details about a church or cemetery were not microfiched. Such material still accompanies hard copies of the transcriptions held in the New Zealand Cemetery Section of the Library.

Most transcriptions include an official or sketch plan. Sketch plans are usually microfiched but official plans are rarely microfiched because of their size. Where possible any names on such plans were extracted on to a separate list for filing.

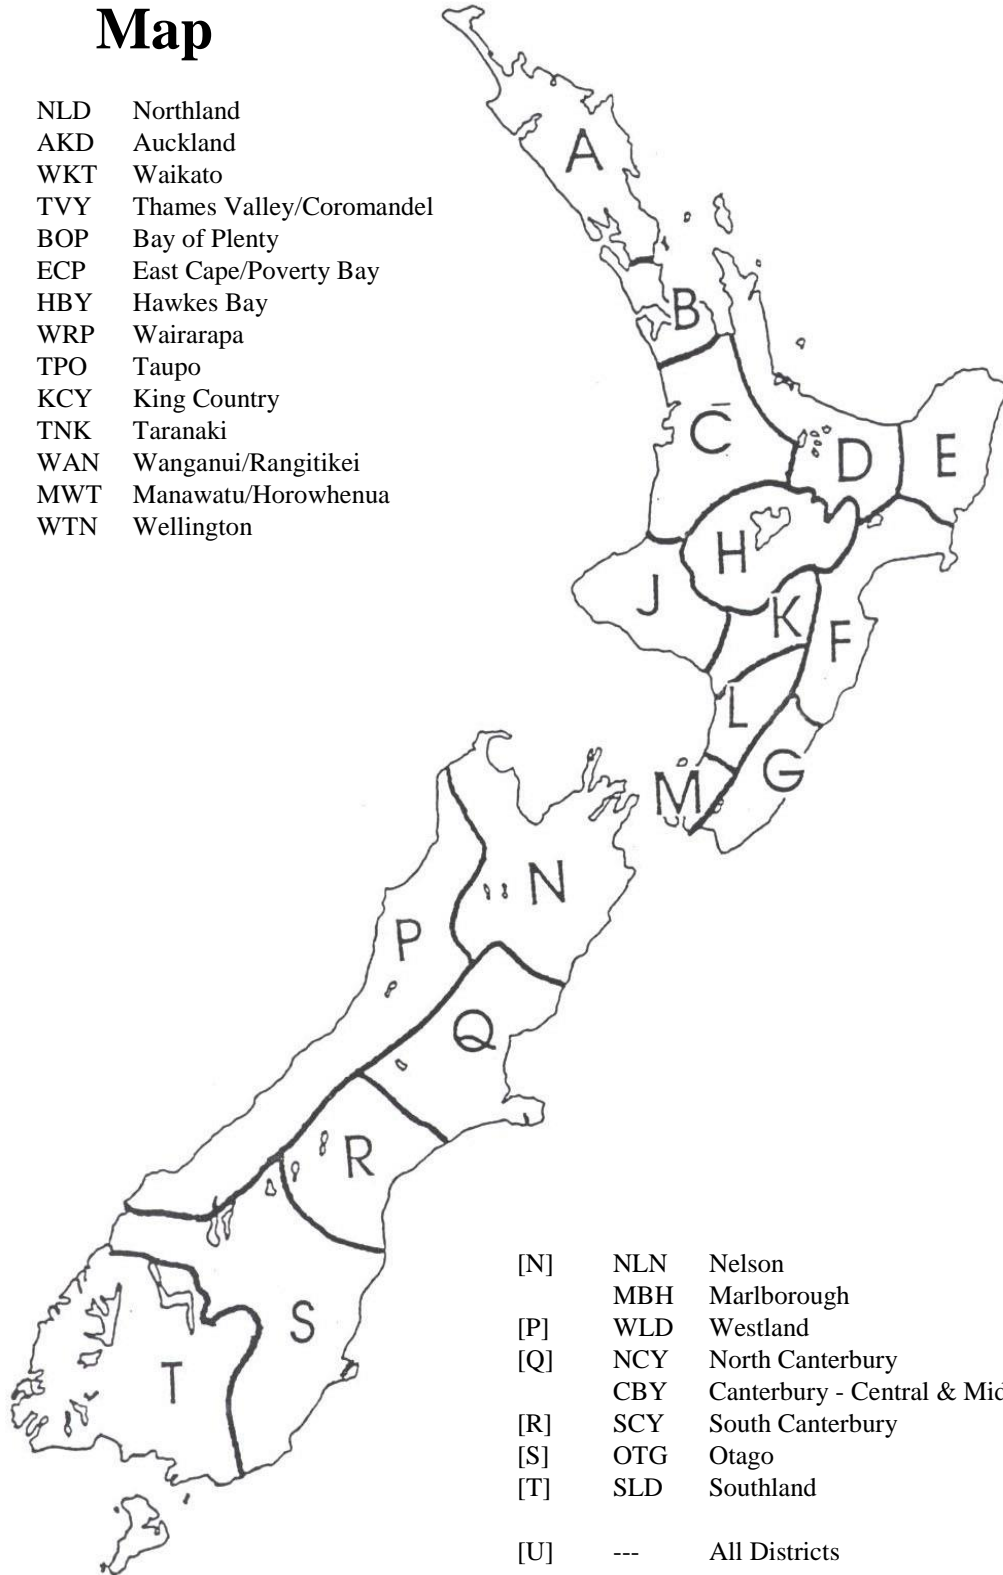

Public Memorials

Most counties have a Public Memorials file listed at the end of the county. These contain smaller items - plaques from churches, war and other memorials, isolated graves etc. Isolated graves are listed with the place name and personal surname. (For example: Otaio, to COLLIER.) These place names have not been included in the alphabetical list.

Index to Cemeteries

Geographic Listing

The New Zealand cemetery transcriptions listed here are arranged in geographic order by land district from north to south, making the search of a complete district a simple task.

The name of the district is shown on the left hand side of each fiche heading, with the numbers of the individual cemeteries contained on that fiche. Transcription pages are arranged from left to right across the fiche and should be read in that manner.

Cemetery Numbers

Each district is divided into counties and the cemeteries are listed in alphabetical order within the county. Each transcription has been allocated a number as per the following example:-

A04.06	=	A	District=	Northland District (NLD)
		04	County	= Hokianga County
		.06	Cemetery	= Rawene Cemetery

Dates

Dates given in the listing are those covering all records within a transcription. Sometimes burial records pre-date headstone transcriptions but very often early burial records have been lost or accidentally destroyed by fire.

The earliest date refers to that recorded on a headstone even if the actual burial occurred elsewhere.

For example:-

Port Chalmers New Cemetery opened in 1881 but several earlier dates are recorded on headstones, the earliest being 1841.
